

reSources: Saving Living Systems

Hi, Team

Our project "reSources: Saving Living Systems" is the dream of thirteen years and we are about to start. Brock Dolman, Director of the Water Institute at Occidental Arts and Ecology Center, and myself are going to the Tibetan area of Western Sichuan the end of this month to complete research and begin implementation. We are documenting the springs and sacred sites – those sites that a community acknowledges as sustaining life – and analyzing systems and beginning educational programs.

The good news is that we have $12,000! We need another $5,000.....and, if everyone could give $25, we would have all we need to do the research and testing. Any donation is profoundly appreciated.

Thank you in advance,

Betsy Damon
